ARID OHIO SOAKS UP SLIGHT RAIN

RAIN FRIDAY NIGHT AIDS LITTLE; HAUL WATER TO VILLAGES

Greene County Is Favored Over Other
Ohio Counties

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 7.—Soaking up a rain that was a mere "drop in the bucket" as compared with needs, thirsty Ohio today scanned the skies for more relief while Governor George White's emergency relief cabinet proceeded with plans to haul water to arid-stricken districts in the southern portion of the state.

Rainfall in scattered areas last night, according to weather prognosticators and members of the state's relief committee, was not sufficient to bring any appreciable relief to drought sufferers although occasional rains Saturday and Sunday may afford some of the long-looked-for aid.

Central Ohio recorded a rainfall of .25 inches—"not enough to do much good," it was said. Other districts of the state, likewise, benefited from the mere drizzle only slightly.

With suffering intense in southern districts of the state, tank trucks, manned by state highway crews, were ordered to haul water to towns most seriously stricken including Barnesville, Woodsfield, New Concord, Meigs County towns and any others in need, Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson, chairman of the governor's relief committee, said.

In Meigs County, water is being hauled from the Ohio River at a cost of one-half cent a gallon, the state health department learned today.

Although the situation is none too bright, adequate water supplies have been found in New Matamoras, Washington County, Scioto in Harrison County, and Carrollton, county seat of Carroll County, health investigators reported.

Meanwhile, efforts to relieve the state's unemployment situation gained impetus today when emergency highway crews of twenty men in each of twenty-five suffering counties were placed at work on salaries of $15 a week. The jobs were assigned to the unemployed selected by committees in each of the counties.

Greene County farmers were jubilant Saturday over the prospect that respite from the "winter drought," which has existed in this locality for more than three weeks, is at hand.

Intermittent rainfall Friday evening and throughout the night afforded a slight measure of relief, but a genuine downpour is needed to the arid soil is to be aided materially, it is said.

The rainfall up until 8 a. m. Saturday amounted to .34 inches, marking the first precipitation in this vicinity since January 19, exclusive of .02 of an inch of snowfall January 21, it was announced by Weatherman Ernest Harner, of the Xenia observatory.

The drizzle Friday night, is, however, declared by weather observers to be the forerunner of rain to be bestowed on this locality in more generous quantities Sunday. Occasional rain is predicted for Saturday with the possibility of greater precipitation Sunday accompanied by rising temperatures.

SOUTHARD SELECTS HEALTH ASSISTANT

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 7.—Re-appointment of J. E. Bauman as assistant director of health was announced today by Health Director H. G. Southard.

Southard said he had cut the department's payroll $210 per month by dropping Pearl G. Thompson, who was chief of the bureau of hospitals. The entire work of the bureau will be performed, he said, by Clara Reeder, who served as assistant chief. The compensation received by the two women totaled $410 monthly.

SOPHIE TUCKER TO BECOME BRITISHER

"I have wanted to become a naturalized Britisher for a very long time," Miss Tucker declared in an interview, "but my trips backward and forward over the Atlantic have left me with no time. Now, however, I intend to spend more time than ever in England, and I am at once going to take the necessary steps to become a British subject."

FOURTEEN INSANE ARE SOUGHT AFTER ESCAPE DURING ASYLUM FIRE

Twenty-One Break For Freedom When 300 Released From Building In Path Of Flames; Seven Are Recaptured

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 7.—Officers today were scouring Nashville and its environs for fourteen of twenty-one criminally insane patients of Central State Hospital for the Insane who escaped during a fire last night.

The patients made a break for liberty when it became necessary to release 300 patients as fire of unknown origin swept into the west wing of the institution. Seven of the inmates who succeeded in escaping were recaptured during the night.

The fire was finally brought under control after two fire companies from Nashville responded to the call. The blaze was confined to the west wing, and the damage was estimated to be $2,500.

All of the patients who escaped were men.

The three hundred patients in the wing were turned loose in the yards, and were herded together by guards. During the excitement twenty-one patients succeeded in getting away.

The seven inmates who were recaptured were overtaken soon after they left the hospital grounds.

All of the patients still at large are criminally insane and were described as being subjected to spells of maniacal violence.

Virtually every emergency officer and hospital guard was detailed to aid in the search for the escaped madmen.

POSTAL CARD WARNS TWO GANGSTERS TO BE TAKEN FOR RIDE

Hints At Fate Of Marcus
And His Girl Friend
Recently

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 7.—An unsigned penny postal card, warning that two more Cincinnati gangsters are slated for "a ride," today was believed by authorities to have revealed the fates of John Marcus, slain notorious racketeer, and his "girl friend," Margie Hensley.

The card, scrawled in penciled underworld jargon, was received at the first district police station, City Hall. Considerable significance was attached to the card and its contents. Police declared that the two "marked" gangsters were well known in southern Ohio.

Marcus was slain because he was a "no good stool," the postal card read.

"He only got his because he had it coming for bumping off a couple of guys," it said, according to police.

The card also said that Marcus' "Moll," Margie Hensley, had been taken for a "floating party"—drowned.

Naming the victims, the card said that "there are two more rats going for a ride pretty soon."

Marcus' body is being held at the Butler County morgue. No one has claimed it and authorities indicated that the racketeer will be buried in Potter's field.

"Jew" John was found slain in the basement of an unoccupied house near Hamilton. His body, trussed up with picture wire, was riddled with bullets.

DAUGHERTY IS FACING TRIAL

State Bank Chief
Will Be Witness

WASHINGTON, C. H., O., Feb. 7.—Preparations were being completed today for the opening of trial here Monday of Mal S. Daugherty, former president of the defunct Ohio State Bank, on charges of irregularities in the handling of the bank's funds.

O. C. Gray, Columbus, state banking superintendent, is among the witnesses for the state who have been summoned by Prosecuting Attorney Norman E. McLean. Other witnesses will include former employees of the bank and local business men.

The prosecutor asked Gray to bring various reports dealing with the condition of the bank prior to its closing a year ago, also a number of letters said to have been received by the state banking department from Daugherty when the latter was president of the defunct bank.

The witnesses have been requested to appear Wednesday, the prosecutor anticipating that the jury will have been impeached by that time.

BUSTER AND EX-FILM BEAUTY BATTLE

Hollywood is buzzing over the beating of Buster Keaton, inset, movie comedian, said to have been administered by Kathleen Key, ex-film beauty, above, and which friends and studio police joined in stopping at Culver City, Cal. Keaton explained the attack by saying he refused to listen to a demand of the actress for money, when she allegedly threatened him. Miss Key made no statement.

EXPLOSION OF TUNNEL GAS IMPERILS CROWD

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—Twenty-nine persons today were suffering from injuries as the result of an explosion which blew a manhole cover through the bottom of a taxi-cab in front of the Orpheum Theatre. It was believed the explosion was caused when accumulated gas in a service tunnel was ignited. Two of the victims may die.

A great crowd was gathered in front of the theatre to watch film celebrities depart when the explosion occurred and caused a near panic.

The blast was heard for blocks and caused considerable apprehension in the theatre where the audience was watching the premiere of the picture "Cimarron," whose principals were making a personal appearance.

The two most seriously injured were the driver and passenger of the cab.

The others injured were struck by flying pieces of pavement and plate glass. They were rushed to Emergency Hospital for treatment.

DROUGHT RELIEF COMPROMISE WILL AVOID EXTRA SESSION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The compromise drought relief settlement, under which a $20,000,000 fund will be provided for food loans to stricken farmers, paved the way to an orderly adjournment of the dying seventy-first congress—unless the insurgent bloc of the senate foments an unexpected revolt.

The new drought relief plan had the endorsement of the White House and of Republican and Democratic leaders in house and senate. Only an insurgent—Senator Brookhart (R) of Iowa—protested it was "unsatisfactory" and not certain to relieve the starvation conditions in the drought areas. Brookhart insisted the appropriation be made outright, instead of for loans to drought sufferers.

Having pacified Democratic leaders, the administration was prepared to deal harshly with any insurgent rebellion. Under present plans, any filibustering tactics by the insurgents against appropriation bills will be met by invoking the seldom-used "rag rule" of cloture, which limits debate and throttles dilatory maneuvers. Consequently, administration leaders hopelessly boasted there was no longer any danger of a special session of the new congress being forced after March 4.

The $20,000,000 food loan measure will settle the chief controversy between White House and senate.

Some other relief measures remain to be enacted and the senate today considered one, to authorize a $100,000,000 increase in the public building program. This bill provides $65,000,000 of this sum could be spent in the states with in the next year.

There will be other unemployment and drought relief legislation.

GANGSTER SOUGHT IN BUCKLEY KILLING IS MURDERED BY RIVALS

Hide-Out Arsenal Of Chester Lamare Is Murder Scene

DETROIT, Feb. 7.—Traced to his arsenal hide-out by rival gangsters, Chester Lamare, alleged underworld czar and sought by police since last July when Gerald E. Buckley, crime-crusading radio announcer was assassinated, was murdered here today by gangland hoodlums.

Lamare, aged 47, is also alleged by authorities to have engineered the famous "fish market" murders, so-called because the victims were "big-time" bootleggers posing as proprietors of fish markets. Slayings of the latter men are said to have precipitated the underworld into the carnival of seventeen gangster slayings in nearly as many days last July. The latter were in turn climaxed by the sensational murder of the popular radio announcer, who was "put on the spot" in the LaSalle Hotel lobby.

Lamare's wife stumbled across the purported gang chief's body when she returned from a corner drug store early today. A bullet hole in the back told the story of the violent death.

Prosecutor Harry S. Toy, immediately notified by police, predicted that the Lamare killing was probably the signal for a new outbreak of gang warfare here.

"Other shootings are almost sure to follow," the prosecutor said.

Police who searched Lamare's hideout home after his wife had reported the murder found a small arsenal in the place. Six revolvers, a tear gas gun, a repeating rifle, an automatic rifle and hand grenades were found undisturbed. More than 4,000 rounds of ammunition were also found.

Lamare had been diligently sought by authorities since the Buckley slaying when a special grand jury started to probe vice and crime conditions here. Lamare was regarded by police as a "key figure" in the underworld. Police believed that he knew the "inside story" of the Buckley killing although they did not implicate him directly in it.

The gangster's body was found slumped forward in the kitchen of the hide-out. No resistance had been made. Lamare apparently thinking that a rap on the rear door was his wife returning from the store. He answered to see his caller step aside and then to become the target for a round of machine gun bullets. Only one found its mark but it caused instant death.

Extra police precautions have already been set into motion to prevent a renewed "reign of terror" by local gangland.

The commission unanimously recommended that all restrictions governing physicians in the writing of prescriptions be abolished. The drys rode rough-shod over it and defeated it.

The commission unanimously recommended that section 29 of the Volstead act be amended so as to put wine-making on the same illegal basis as beer-making in the home. But the present dry congress will have none of it.

These were virtually the only reforms upon which the commission could muster unanimous support. Their unanimity has failed to impress congress.

The drys are rendering lip service to the proposal to amend section 29 so as to bring wine-making in the home within the pale of the law, but significantly none of them has yet introduced any legislation to bring it about. Nor is any intended, so far as is known.

Thus, the California grape growers, who have borrowed $19,000,000 from the federal farm board with which to finance a nation-wide sale of grape concentrate, easily convertible into wine, are left free to carry on their campaign with the tact if not vocal, approbation of the drys.

Senator Tydings (D) of Maryland, leader of the senate wets, amused the senate by reading to it the advertisements which are flooding Washington concerning the grape concentrate. The advertisements have thoroughly covered the capital, going to cabinet officers and members of congress as well as to private individuals.

"Under this law," said Tydings with a broad grin, "it is perfectly legal to manufacture 20 per cent wine, but it is illegal to make 5 per cent beer."

The senate merely laughed. Only one dry challenged Tydings' argument. Senator Morris Sheppard (D) of Texas, one of the authors of the eighteenth amendment, replied that "any misguided person who attempts to follow your advice will have to answer to the law."

"What law?" countered the grinning Tydings. "The courts are against you. They have decided, in numerous opinions, that under section 29 of the Volstead act it is not illegal to make this wine. It is so advertised in this—waving the concentrate advertisement."

The senate just laughed, and went on to the consideration of other things.

REVELERS VICTIMS AT TRAIN CROSSING EARLY ON SATURDAY

Dayton Man, Another
Man, Two Women,
Are Victims

HAMILTON, O., Feb. 7.—Four persons were killed almost instantly today when the automobile in which they were riding was struck with a terrific impact and carried for four city blocks on the cow-catcher of a fast north-bound Baltimore and Ohio freight train here.

The victims were identified as Mrs. Emily Collins, 29, a divorcee; Sarah Jones, 25, her sister; Jasper Hines, 48, all of Hamilton, and Herbert Campbell, 46, of Dayton. Campbell was married and has two children.

The accident occurred at a street crossing near the B. & O. passenger station. The four occupants of the death-doomed automobile were believed to have been returning from a dance when they drove on the railroad tracks directly in the path of the speeding train.

The locomotive picked up the automobile like a top, ripping it into splinters and hurling the wreckage for yards along the tracks. Debris was strewn for nearly 300 yards.

The bodies of the four victims were mangled almost beyond recognition. Identification was established only through torn bits of clothing and pieces of debris scattered about the scene of the accident.

Details of the accident were lacking because at the hour of the tragedy there was no one near as a witness. It was believed, however, that the driver of the car and the other occupants, reveling on their way home from a dance, failed to hear or see the approaching train.

Investigation into the accident was started immediately by local authorities, assisted by officials of the B. and O. Railroad Company. The probe was hampered by the little evidence the tragedy left in its wake.

Members of the freight crew said the death-dealing train was traveling at a good rate of speed when it struck the automobile.

One member of the train crew estimated that the train was traveling at about twenty-five miles an hour when the accident occurred. The engineer stated that he was unable to bring his locomotive to a stop for approximately 2,900 feet.

DETROIT, Feb. 7.—Three men were instantly killed today when their automobile, which was said to have been traveling at a terrific rate of speed, crashed into a Pere Marquette railroad train at a plainly-marked crossing here.

The speeding automobile struck the second car behind the locomotive, bringing instant death to Albert Thompson, 26, Frederick Walker, 28, and Benjamin Barnett, 28, all of Detroit.

LOGAN, O., Feb. 7.—Struck by passenger train near here while walking home from work, James Myers, 63, was dead today. He was almost instantly killed.

SUBWAY CRASH INJURES 20

The crash occurred when a three-car string of empties bumped into the rear of a six-car train in which about 150 men and women were passengers. Many of the passengers were asleep in their seats when the collision occurred, and some of them were thrown the length of the car.

LORETTA YOUNG AND HUSBAND WILL PART

Shortly after their marriage, Miss Young's mother sought to have it annulled on the grounds that the bride was but 17 years old.

For the past few months Withers has been in vaudeville. At present he is at Pittsburgh, Pa.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul. — Hebrews, I, 38, 39.

SPENDING RELIEF MONEY

Not merely is the raising of relief money for the drought sufferers a big problem, but it is an equally baffling one to spend it. It was given out, in connection with the $25,000,000 appropriation which the government was asked to make, that the Red Cross would not undertake to distribute such a sum on behalf of the government. If the Red Cross will not administer such a fund if the appropriation is made, the government would have to find its own ways to distribute it.

It is easy enough to distribute such a fund, but getting it to the people who ought to have it is another proposition. If the government has $25,000,000 to spend, many people will clamor for a share who are not entitled to have any of it, while many other worthy people who should be helped, will be restrained from asking for it, because of their pride.

If such distribution is handled by the local politicians of the 21 states where the drought suffering is worst, some of them might distribute it in a very indiscriminating way. Favoritism and friendship would count in other places.

Politicians are usually warm hearted people who would mean to distribute such a fund fairly, but sympathy for any old hard luck story would get the better of good judgment and justice in many cases, and many stories that fail to coincide with the facts would be accepted at face value.

The people will hope that whatever sums the government may appropriate will be distributed by the Red Cross. This great organization has had the training for such emergencies, it has its agencies all over the country, and it would make the money go much farther than if it was handled by less experienced persons.

MAN MADE FOR GOD

Saint Augustine said, "Man was made for God and he is restless until he rests in God." However, some hearts become so calloused that love makes no appeal to them; there are those whose spiritual sensibilities have become so desensitized that they do not respond to religious motives but they are the exceptions.

How is religious emotion awakened? Just as the sense of beauty is awakened by standing in front of a work of art, a fair face, an alluring landscape, in a similar manner, religious emotion is dependent on our seeing God in prayer, or the witnessing of some righteous act, or in the written article portraying holy experiences. If we neglect religion, the soul will be like an uncultivated garden where flowers and weeds grow, or a badly managed business which ends in bankruptcy.

CIVIC AMBITION

To promote development of one's town, there must be a spirit of community ambition in the minds of the people. The future of that community must be very dear to their hearts. They must take pride in its welfare, regret its losses, and hope warmly for its advance.

If people have that feeling about their home town, it is hard to prevent it from going ahead. Without effort they will take hold of movements necessary to secure progress and make them a success. How can we promote that feeling here, may well be asked. One good way to promote it is for people to make it a fixed habit to talk in favor of their home town. Point out the excellent things it has done, and forget its failures, is a good rule.

Why does John Erskine worry because of "European condescension toward America in the matter of the arts." Doesn't he know that Europe feels it must maintain a good market for its "art objects" in this country, and can do so only by fomenting an inferiority complex on this side of the Atlantic? It's a matter of business, salesmanship.

The row in Sweden because Prince Lennart wants to marry the daughter of an untitled industrialist seems rather absurd when one recalls that the great, great grandfather of King Gustav, who objects, was an untitled French lawyer.

Judging from the plans he announces, "Big Bill" Thompson thinks that a political campaign should be made as much like a circus parade as possible. Doesn't he know that circus parades are out of date?

Except that it relieves their feelings, we never have been able to understand why malcontents in other countries rush to the United States to tell us all their troubles.

ALL of US —By— MARSHALL MASLIN

MUST YOU LET HIM GET AWAY WITH IT?

Somebody does something, says something. Something mean, selfish, thoughtless. Something that hurts you or hurts a friend of yours. Not a big thing. A matter of a few dollars or a few moments of your time. But it hurts your pride or outrages your sense of how human beings ought to act.

Well, what are you going to do about it? Tell him what you think of him, fight him, use hard words—or let him get away with it. There's a problem for you, there's a battle. You never quite know what you ought to do.

You're all mixed up about it. If you get into a rage, clench your fists, shout to the high heavens, and fight for your rights—you win the battle. But after you've won it, where are you? You may feel a first glow of victory, but the glow fades on you and the spoils decay before you have had time to enjoy them to the fullest. You wonder whether it was worth while fighting for such a little thing. And you don't feel as happy as you thought you would. You've shown them that they can't impose on you, but what good did it do YOU? . . . You can't be sure.

But suppose you let it go. Suppose you let him get away with it. What then? The fellow who bumped into you and nearly knocked you flat, will go his way bumping into other people and making a nuisance of himself forever and ever. The woman who didn't respect your rights at all will become more and more of a bully. If you let such people get away with little things, they'll try to get away with bigger things—and cause a lot of grief to innocent men and women. . . . That's how you figure it out, how you explain things to yourself.

I don't know the answers. I've acted both ways. I've been bawled out and I've been ignored. I've blown up and gotten red in the face, and I've also treated pirates and bullies with that "silent disdain" you hear so much about. Sometimes I think one method is right and sometimes I lean the other way. People who have permanent chips on their shoulders never look very happy; other people who never seem to notice life's insults, almost always look serene and contented. . . . Do you know the right answer?

What is the capital of China? The new Nationalist capital of China is Nanking. The capital formerly was at Peking.

Yankee Doodle

What is the origin of the song "Yankee Doodle"? The origin of the song "Yankee Doodle" is unknown. The words, which were in derision of the ill-assorted provincial troops, were probably written by Edward Bangs some time between 1775 and 1777. The original title of the song, not the tune, was "The Yankee's Return From Camp." The tune passed through various changes. It has been ascribed to various countries, but is probably of English birth. That it must have been generally known before 1767 seems likely, as in Barton's opera, "The Disappointment" (1767) one of the lyrics is to be sung to the tune of "Yankee Doodle."

Bo-Broadway

—By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE—

NEW YORK—One of the blessings of radio is that it has shortened the speeches of public men. Time was when the chief orator used to take forty minutes to establish the fact that he had nothing to say.

Radio has changed all this. The average hook-up is from fifteen to thirty minutes, so that orators have had to establish terminal facilities.

LO! THE POOR HEATHEN

And the other famous story of Mark Twain who, five minutes after listening to a foreign missionary, decided to contribute ten dollars to save the heathen.

The Doc kept on talking, however, and after he'd rounded out an hour and the collection basket came by Mark Twain said:

"Instead of contributing ten dollars I stole a dime out of it."

A MEMORY TO CHERISH

Natalie Hays Hammond, daughter of Jack Hammond, internationally famous inventor and civil engineer, was discussing the other day the problem of whether it's better to start life with a father on the bread line or with a papa who owns a bank.

"Surely," quoth Natalie, "it must be plain that our struggles, real as they seem to us, are superficial compared with those of the boy who is handicapped by every sort of poverty, by the memory of the sort of person his mother was."

Natalie is a little bit ahead of me there. When a boy reaches that stage in life where he finds it a "handicap" to remember "what sort of person his mother was," he might solve the problem by jumping off the roof.

As a matter of fact, it there's any young man so situated who may

WHETHER HE LIKES IT OR NOT!

INCOME TAX REMOVAL AND LEGALIZED LIQUOR MIGHT NOT AID MANY

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—The wets' and dries' whole debate is so wonderful that perhaps no single detail of it can be called especially amazing; all its details seem entitled to the superlative classification.

Otherwise one might feel justified in expressing a little extra surprise at the effective use made by wets of the argument: "Think of the enormous revenue Uncle Sam could be collecting if the liquor trade were legalized, with a thumping tax on it!"

In itself, the proposition is sound enough. The late Joseph S. McCoy, veteran treasury actuary, told me shortly before his recent death that he estimated an excise on alcoholic beverages, at pre-prohibition rates, would end the necessity for future federal income taxation.

I have no doubt he was quite right; he was a marvelous statistician and taxes were his specialty. His opinion generally was recognized as final on that subject.

However, comparatively few folk, wet or dry, have incomes large enough to be taxed.

What good can it do such people to have income taxation abolished? To be sure, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon does maintain that cuts in the higher income tax rates benefit even us financial peevish, but it is a mighty indirect benefit at best; nothing for the average head of a family, on $3,500 a year or less, to get excited about. In fact, I can see how he may suffer; suppose he is taxed on to help make up for what is lopped off from the big fellows' assessments.

Assume, for the sake of a round figure, that, as against each man in the country with an at present, taxable income, there are 1,000 of us with incomes too insignificant to be levied on, who do, nevertheless, take an occasional drink, or would, if drinks were legalized, and taxed, as per the wets' suggestion.

This would mean (would it not?) that each plutocrat referred to "could be excused from further income taxation; the small fry would make up the kitty, amongst us. It is easy to understand a wet income taxpayer's approval of such an arrangement; not so easy to understand why it appeals to the little chaps.

Yet it is an idea which evidently does have a powerful appeal to the little chaps—I mean the wets, of course.

Of all the contentions advanced by the wet leaders, the one which weighs most with the most people, is the contention that the government ought to be getting the money that bootleggers are standing on the edge of the roof, looking the guts to jump, we'll be doing at the moment and go down and push him off.

WATCH YOUR STEP

If you happen to have a bag of peanuts in your pocket and a mysterious stranger ankles up on rubber heels and begins to question about the goobers, answer every question he asks.

The United States senate has just passed a bill providing for the collection of all statistics on peanuts, by the terms of which, "any persons who shall refuse or willfully neglect to furnish information—shall be guilty of a misdemeanor." Fine 300 to 1,000 bucks or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

are pocketing now, as exorbitant profits.

The rich, income taxpaying wets, who finance orcs various anti-eighteenth amendment "movements," dwell on it constantly—and, as previously remarked, I realize perfectly why they feel that way about it. But why do the rank and file, who echo them, feel so similarly? Are they so fond of their wet leaders that they are altruistically anxious to pay the latter's taxes for them?

True, the wet leaders point out that folk who drink are already paying to bootleggers as much as they would be paying to the government, if drinks were legalized and put on a tax-yielding basis—maybe more, in addition to which it is notorious that today's drinks are atrocious.

But even so—Why is it that none of the wet leaders ever proposes drink legislation minus the taxation feature? Can it be that they are not particularly interested in slaking the public's thirst unless they can wash their taxes off onto the public at the same time?

In pre-prohibition days there actually were reformers who advocated, as a temperance measure, the abolition of drink taxation and

Peter's Adventures

—By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent—

TEARING UP THINGS Lively was much pleased because Busy took her part and everything would have been as merry as a marriage bell had it not been for a great hue and cry that arose some way off. Busy, Lively and Peter the boy strained their eyes and ears to find out what it was all about.

Busy could neither hear nor see clearly. The two ants, however, lay their antennae on the ground and soon they informed Peter what the matter was.

The dissatisfied ants are making trouble!" said Lively, and Busy added:

"Starting their old revolution or my antennae deceives me! Turning the ant-hill upside down!" cried the two ants in chorus.

Turning the ant-hill upside down was exactly what they were doing. Each one of the troublesome crowd was scratching in the ground and digging up bits of earth and tossing it over their shoulders as they marched toward the three friends who looked on in amazement. Every now and again a bit of straw or a tiny pebble sailed through the air dangerously close to Peter's head, as the angry ants tore these out of the walls of the ant-hill. The rebels tore up everything they could lay their claws to.

"Silly things, to act like that!" scoffed Peter. "Those ants will not have a roof over their heads if they keep that up long. And when they have lost the only home they have ever known where will they go, what will they do?"

"They, themselves, don't know," jeered Lively and Busy. "They don't stop to think of things like that when they are mad. Ants don't. But we could tell them a thing or two—that all the surrounding Black Anthills are already overcrowded and they wouldn't be welcomed in another hill in the neighborhood. There are plenty of monsters roaming the fields that would be ready and willing to devour them if they ventured among the grasses after nightfall, unprotected."

Next: "Speeding to Safety."

the licensing system. They insisted that "treating" would disappear if drinks were regarded as mere staples, like flour or molasses; that saloons were a creation of licensing.

I don't say they were right. I merely ask: How much support could such a plan count on from the big income taxpayers, who furnish the sinews of war for our present anti-eighteenth amendment activities?

Oranges and grapefruit have not been so cheap for years as they are now. Therefore, use them freely in your menus. Simply use half the grapefruit, take out the seeds and chill, serving with a marmalade or orange marmalade.

Why is it that none of the wet leaders ever proposes drink legislation minus the taxation feature? Can it be that they are not particularly interested in slaking the public's thirst unless they can wash their taxes off onto the public at the same time?

Today's Recipes
Peanut Butter Tea Biscuits—Two cups pastry flour, one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon sugar, four teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons shortening, four tablespoons peanut butter, milk. Sift dry ingredients at least twice. Rub in shortening and peanut butter and add milk slowly to make a soft dough. Roll out three-fourths-inch thick, cut out with small cutter and bake quickly in hot oven, from 12 to 15 minutes. These are delicious served with tart jelly.

Oatmeal Cookies.—One tablespoon fat, three tablespoons syrup, one teaspoon flour, two tablespoons sugar, one egg, beaten; one and one-half cups rolled oats, one and one-half teaspoons flour, one-half teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Combine the fat, melted sugar and syrup, add egg and flouring. Stir in the other ingredients mixed together. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven about fifteen minutes. Makes 25 to 28 cookies.

Suggestions
Bananas in Cake
In baking banana cake, instead of slicing bananas the round way, try slicing them lengthwise. I find cake is much easier to cut, as the slices stay in place.

Clean Medicine Cabinet
Clean the medicine cabinet often. Take out all the bottles and wash the outside with a cloth wrung from soapy water. Discard all the empty ones. Throw away or put in its rightful place anything that does not actually belong in the cabinet. Take out the glass shelves, scrub them in a bowl of hot soapy water, and polish them dry. Scrub the interior of the cabinet.

Diet Rich In Sugars Best

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"Medical drainage of the gall bladder" was a term used in this column several weeks ago and puzzled some of my readers greatly. It refers to a method of treatment in great vogue several years ago. It is not used so frequently now, but still has its value in proper cases.

It depends for its action on the old method of treating mild infections of the gall bladder. This was to have the patient drink a large glass of epsom salts or sodium phosphate dissolved in hot water before breakfast. The solution was imbibed slowly and was supposed to open up the mouth of the gall bladder in the intestines and allow the infected bile to drain out.

The next step in our understanding of the way it worked came from Dr. S. J. Meltzer. He showed that if magnesium sulphate (epsom salts) were applied directly in the intestines, the muscle which kept this opening closed would relax. At the same time the gall bladder would contract and force bile into the intestine.

Instead of depending on the uncertainties of action of the epsom salts which were taken in the morning, it occurred to a Philadelphia physician that the salts could be introduced into the intestine exactly at the place wanted. He therefore had his patients swallow a small metal bulb with perforations in it and attached to a hollow rubber tube. This would go easily into the stomach, and when the patient lay on the right side for a while would gradually get out into the intestine, and he just over the opening of the bile ducts. When this had occurred a 50 per cent solution of epsom salts was run through the tube and appeared in the intestine exactly at the place wanted. The gall bladder contracted, the contained bile flowed out into the intestine, and was sucked up by the tube. If it contained infectious material or pus this was removed from the body.

In proper cases it seems to do a great deal of good. It is of no value when gallstones have actually formed.

Biliary antiseptics—substances which have an antiseptic action and are excreted into the gall bladder when taken by mouth—have not been found very valuable in treating gall tract infection. One of these substances is called methenamine and another mercurochrome, but their action is very uncertain. The diet which should be free from fat and rich in sugar, was prescribed yesterday.

Plenty of exercise in the open air and a deliberate attempt to lose weight complete the scheme for the medical management of gall bladder disease.

This regimen will often, with the help of time, result in a resolution of the trouble. Even if it does not it will put the patient in good physical condition for surgical intervention.

Forget Divorced Man

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

"My Dear Miss Lee: I think a lot of a man who was divorced a year ago by his wife. He always talks about her everytime he's in my company. All I hear is, 'My wife was so smart; my wife could save money better than anyone else; my wife, etc. He listens to our radio and seems in a daze every time they play anything sentimental. I have asked him why he acts this way, and his only answer is that he can't forget her and still cares."

"Do you think I should bother with him any more or give him up? He has tried to effect a reconciliation with you but she won't let him in reply that she would always be a good friend, but could never live with him again. Don't you think he should forget her and not talk about her when he is in my company?"

"He has a terrible temper, and if I dare to talk on this subject to him he flares up and goes wild and tells me to mind my own business."

"So tell me, Miss Lee, shall I give him up and get a single fellow and let him alone to dream of his wife, or will he change in time?"

ANXIOUS

Since what you want is to be in all to a chap, anxious, and this man isn't, I love with his wife and merely uses you to listen to him while he raves about her. I think you had better let him go and get a single man with less on his mind. He may forget her enough in time to ask you to marry him, provided you continue to go with him. I don't envy you the job of being his second wife. Everything you do that doesn't suit his fancy will be compared, doubtless, to the way his first wife would have done it, and you'll lead an unhappy existence. It will be worse than if she was dead, because he may see her occasionally, a . . . that will renew his passion for her. He doesn't want a new sweetheart. What he needs is a sympathetic soul to tell his troubles to. If you don't want to fill that role, you had better step out of the picture.

And possibly the temper he displays when he "goes wild" when you mention your objections to his monologues about his wife, is just a hint of what his wife had to put up with before she secured her divorce, and the whyfore of the separation.

Lonesome Lover: If you think that you could accept the boy friend's religion, and be happy married to him, there is no reason in the world why you shouldn't do your best to make up with him.

WAITING: You are not alone in your problem, my dear. Plenty like you and wondering about it. It's one of those perennial questions: Are you, by any chance, a little self-conscious when with the boys? Do you expect them to make all the advances, or do you meet them half way and allow them to see that you are interested? If you do these things, keep your Pollyanna attitude, and be sure that you'll have your innings, although they come a little late. You not only have a nice disposition with all the rest of your advantages, but you have a nice sense of humor, which is a great asset in a pal or a wife. If the boys just take time to discover you.

Rinse After Brushing of Teeth

—By GLADYS GLAD—

"DEAR MISS GLAD: I've heard so many varying opinions on the comparative merits of tooth powders and tooth pastes that I am rather at a loss as to which form of dentifrice is best to use. However, I have found the instructions on complexion care contained in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet so sensible, and of such great aid to me in eradicating the pimples and blackheads that formerly disfigured my skin that I've decided to base my selection upon your opinion."

Which do you think more advisable for cleansing the teeth—a powder or a paste?

"LORRAINE."

I am of the opinion that powders and pastes are of equal merit as dentifrices. Some people claim that pastes contain substances upon which bacteria thrive. However, when you use your mouth wash after each brushing (and of course, you do) you cleanse every bit of paste from the teeth and gums. Other folk insist that powders are injurious because they contain harsh, scratchy abrasives. A good powder, however, does not contain such materials. Select a paste or powder dentifrice as you prefer. Just take care that it is a well-known, reliable preparation, and that it is not gritty. And be sure that you rinse your mouth thoroughly after each brushing with a good mouth wash.

"Dear Miss Glad: Some time ago my sister procured a most effective list of exercises for developing thin legs. As my legs are too fat, she suggested that I practice these same exercises every day to reduce them. She insists that these exercises would prove just as effective in slenderizing my legs as they were in fattening hers. Is this true?"

DOUBTFUL

It is indeed true that the same exercises that help to develop a thin woman will also prove effective in reducing a fat woman. For exercise activates the

The Theater

The wind-up of "All Quiet on the Western Front," voted "best picture" of 1930 in the Film Daily poll and the appearance of Maurice Chevalier, the French singing star in "Playboy in Paris" and the Bebe Daniels film, "Dixiana," feature the week's program at Xenia picture houses.

The Erich Maria Remarque story, which is almost Remarque's own experience, is being screened at the Orphum, where it concludes a four-days run with Sunday's performances. It is a remarkably realistic war drama, adhering closely to the book and on its success it pushed to prominence Carl Charming costuming helps make it a pretty picture to see.

Reginald Denny and the beautiful Miriam Seegar come to the Orphum Monday and Tuesday in Sono-Art's picture, "What a Man," a jubilation comedy which should interest Denny fans greatly. Mack Sennett's first feature length comedy-talkie, "Midnight Daddies," will be the Orphum attraction Wednesday and Thursday and should prove an interesting experiment in slapstick. Andy Clyde, and Harry Gribbon, have feature length roles in this film and are supported by Rosemary Theby, Addie McPhail, Alma Bennett and others.

Ken Maynard, most popular of the Western stars, winds up the week's schedule at the Orphum. Universal presenting its featured cowboy in "Mountain Justice" in which he is supported by Kathryn Crawford. Otis Harlan also has a strong part in this film, which should draw the Western fans in droves.

Twenty Years '11- Ago '31

The Rev. Emmett Abraham, Middleboro, Ky., has accepted a call to the rectorate of Christ Episcopal Church here.

John R. Malloy, former clerk of the senate, appeared before the state board of control bill committee to plead for the exemption from the Central Board of Management of the O. S. and S. O. Home, of which he is a graduate.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Caster have as their guest, Mr. J. C. Bacon, of Peebles.

Laemmle Jr., its producer, Lewis Milestone, its director and Lewis Ayres, its star, Louis Wolheim and others have strong parts, including a dramatic bit Raymond Griffith contributed as a dying French poet.

"Road to Paradise," a first National production featuring Loretta Young, Jack Mulhall and our old friend Raymond Hatton, plays the Bijou Sunday and Monday. The story is a mystery drama.

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture-ization of Kathleen Norris' novel, "Passion Flower," should attract many fans of Mrs. Norris to the Bijou Tuesday and Wednesday. The picture is well-done with a charming cast, which includes the two Kays, Kay Francis and Kay Johnson. Charles Bickford plays the male hero, Winter Hall, an old favorite of the silent days, has a character part and the rest of the star cast includes Lewis Stone, Zasu Pitts and Dickie Moore. Both girls handle strong dramatic parts.

Chevalier's Paramount offering, "Playboy of Paris," which offers the French star an entrancing vehicle, plays only one day, Thursday, at the Bijou. He is well supported by Frances Dee, O. P. Heggie, Stuart Erwin, Eugene Pallette, Dorothy Christy and others. Chevalier sings many tuneful melodies and makes love in a glorious manner.

"Dixiana," a costume story of 1840 and Mardi Gras season in old New Orleans, offers opportunities for the singing of Bebe Daniels and her new leading man, Everett Marshall, Metropolitan Opera Co., baritone; for the tomfoolery of Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey and for the comedy of Joseph Cawthorne and Johnny Howard. Dorothy Lee is also in the cast and the film is a tuneful one, featuring many melodies already popular.

INJUNCTION ASKED AGAINST TENANT ON FARM; COURT NEWS

Lincoln Funderburgh, ex-sheriff, owner of a 212-acre farm on the Diffendal Road, Ross Twp., has filed an injunction suit in Common Pleas Court against Roy Fields, tenant on his farm. The petition sets forth that the defendant, whose tenancy expires March 1, is now engaged in moving his belongings from the premises, but that he is driving teams and hauling over a clover field instead of using the road because it is more convenient for him to cut across the fields as it lessens the distance to the place where he is moving his property. The plaintiff, asserting he expects to plow the clover field, asks that Fields be enjoined from cutting across it. Harry D. Smith is the plaintiff's attorney.

TWO WIVES ASK DIVORCE

Suit for divorce, on grounds of gross neglect of duty and extreme cruelty, has been filed by Phoebe Jane McCauley against Ralph Addison McCauley, R. R. No. 3, Springfield, Ohio. They were married June 27, 1925 at West Jefferson, O., and have been separated since January 1927, according to the petition. One child, now deceased, was born of the union. The plaintiff asks to be restored to her maiden name of Burtis.

Neff, named co-defendant, claims an interest in the property. The court appointed Sheriff John A. Baughn as receiver to collect rents.

DROUGHT RELIEF COMPROMISE WILL AVOID SESSION

tion enacted before adjournment, but only such measures as have the approval of the President. One measure certain of passage will provide a 44-hour week for postal employees. The Capper bill, authorizing free distribution of 20,000,000 bushels of the farm board's wheat, may be abandoned.

The outcome of other relief proposals did not agitate administration leaders, who looked upon the food loan compromise as assuring the passage of all necessary appropriation bills. There was feeling of uncertainty, however, over the possible attitude of Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, who declared congress should remain in session until proper relief was granted the drought sufferers. Borah was not invited to the conferences and he may oppose the compromise.

The agreement met with endorsement of Democratic leaders, Senators Robinson and Caraway, of Arkansas. Robinson said it removed the danger of a special session so far as he was concerned.

MORE x x x
Both senators said they had assurances the administration would "interpret the bill liberally" and that it provided "food loans" for drought-stricken farmers.

The bill itself would appropriate $20,000,000 under these conditions: "1. Make advances or loans to individuals in the drought and (or) storm or hail stricken areas for the purpose of assisting in forming local agricultural credit corporations, livestock loan companies or like organizations or of increasing the capital stock of such corporations, companies or organizations qualified to do business with federal intermediate credit banks, or to which such privileges may be extended, and of making loans to individuals upon the security of the capital stock of such corporations, companies or organizations, and."

"2. To make advances or loans to farmers for crop production in the drought and (or) storm stricken or hail stricken areas of the United States."

Another provision would allow loans specifically for feeding cows, hogs, chickens and other livestock on the farms.

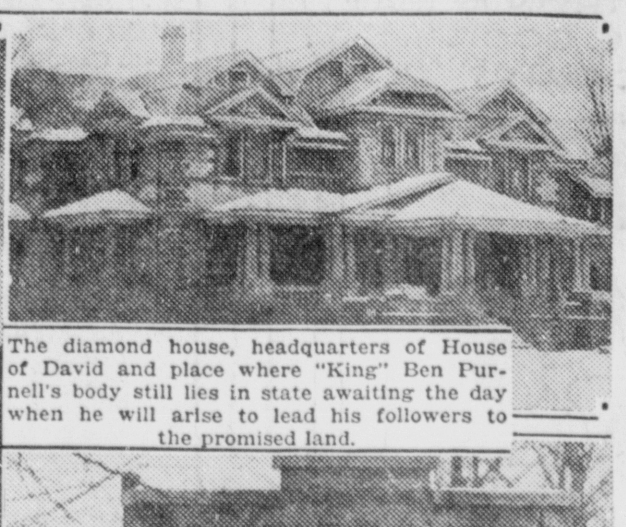

All such loans would be secured "by liens on crops or by other security" as prescribed by the secretary of agriculture.

Democratic leaders declared "food loans" could be made under the provision for "agricultural rehabilitation."

HOUSE OF DAVID FACTIONS WAR OVER TREASURE

Mrs. Ada Ross Schneider with Attorney George H. Bookwalter, former Berrien county prosecutor, preparing her divorce action against her husband, John Schneider, described as Judge Dewhirst's man Friday.

The diamond house, headquarters of House of David and place where "King" Ben Purnell's body still lies in state awaiting the day when he will arise to lead his followers to the promised land.

Headquarters of New Israel, cult established by Mary Purnell after break with Dewhirst.

The vault at the diamond house on House of David property where huge fortune is believed to be buried.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Feb. 7.—Open warfare again exists between the factions in Michigan's strange religious cult, the House of David. With "Queen" Mary Purnell, widow of the late "King" Ben Purnell, founder, on the one side, and Judge Harry T. Dewhirst on the other, a supposed buried treasure of nearly $1,000,000 is at stake.

Reading like the tales of Captain Kidd, the secret of the treasure which, besides money, is said to include thousands of dollars worth of jewels and precious stones, came to light recently when Mrs. Ada Ross Schneider, former confidante of Purnell, left the colony. Prior to departing, Mrs. Schneider demanded a portion of the fortune, which she knew had accumulated during the twenty-five years she was a member.

The two factions. Since King Ben passed away several years ago, rival factions have torn the once closely united group apart. A property division has been made. Judge Dewhirst who heads the House of David, once was legal adviser to King Ben. Queen Mary organized a colony of her own, within a stone's throw of the House of David. She calls her sect the New Israel and has built a home which rivals in size and cost the famous "diamond house" of the older colony where King Ben's body still lies in state "until the day when he shall arise from the dead and lead his followers into the promised land." His mummified body rests on a specially constructed bier in the second story of the "palace."

The Dewhirst group secured the amusement park, zoo, baseball diamond and all of the old buildings, and have made the place into an attractive spot for tourists and curiosity seekers, who are eager to see the activities of the bearded followers.

The present controversy arose when Mrs. Schneider, secretary and auditor of the original colony for twenty-five years, demanded compensation alleged due her, and asserted there was a secret fund buried. When Mrs. Schneider's demand for compensation was refused, she prepared to begin an accounting suit. Dewhirst at the same time began proceedings to compel her to disclose the location of the hidden gold. Twenty-four hours later it was announced a settlement, understood to be $35,000, was reached out of court.

Queen Mary and her faction immediately declared the settlement was made to keep the hiding place of the fortune secret from her faction. She asserted half of it, if found, would be hers, under terms of last year's division of property.

Just where the supposed money is hid is a matter of speculation, although a small stone vault near the diamond house is believed to hold it. In her description of it Mrs. Schneider told of filling a bushel basket with gold pieces ranging from $5 to $50, and of trays of precious gems, besides some $600,000 in gold certificates of $1,000 bonded with rubber bands.

Appeals to Governor

Mary, in desperation, appealed to Governor Wilbur M. Brucker at Lansing to prevent Mrs. Schneider from sailing for England, as she announced she would do Jan. 29.

After turning the matter over to his attorney general the governor said he saw no way of preventing Mrs. Schneider from going where she pleased. Mrs. Schneider began preparation of a divorce action against her husband, John Schneider, described as Judge Dewhirst's man Friday, immediately after the alleged cash settlement.

SOLDIERS' BONUS

The following poem appeared in the January 25 issue of the National Tribune (Stars and Stripes) and was written by A. W. Blackstone, a World War veteran of Jonesboro, Ill. It gives the soldier's idea of the adjusted service certificates. It is the sentiment of countless thousands of our comrades and one with which I fully agree.

Wilbur E. Pitzer.

TOMBSTONE BONUS
After long years of pleading Congress passed the bonus bill. You or I will hardly get it. But our beneficiaries will. They never drafted my small brother.

It was I they gave the gun. And my orders held no clauses When we went to stop the Hun.

I don't have no blood relation And there's bound to be a row I often ask myself this question—Who will get it anyhow? I'll not die and leave a widow. As for children I have none. Anyhow I am the fellow That you gave the pack and gun.

Twenty years will find me feeble. If I live to see the day, For already I am crippled And my hair is turning gray, And there's thousands of my buddies Down and out and all alone—Who will have to find existence In some military home.

Oh: The future makes me shudder, Fills my heart with darkest fear, For my buddies will be victims. Of some scheming profiteer; For the men who need it, mostly Have not of the country's wealth. And they'll have to paw the paper.

Trying to restore their health.

After sober meditation All the solace I can get. We can use it to advantage When we pay life's final debt. And I'm going to leave instructions. When I come to make my will. Write these words upon my tombstone: Paid for with the bonus bill.

DAMAGE SUIT BASED ON ACCIDENT HERE

Suit demanding $15,000 damages, based on personal injuries suffered when the auto in which she was riding was struck by a coal car of a freight train at the W. Main St. crossing in Xenia November 29, 1929 has been filed in the Montgomery County common pleas court by Mrs. Christine Davis, 1058 S. Main St., Dayton, against The Pennsylvania Railroad Co.

Mrs. Davis sustained deep cuts on the forehead and painful bruises but her brother-in-law, Claude Harsh, escaped unharmed when the machine skidded on the ice-coated street, was pushed along the rails by the train and finally upset.

The plaintiff charges the warning signals protecting the crossing did not function and that no watchman was stationed there to notify her of the train's approach.

FLAY SCULPTOR FOR 'UGLY' STATUE

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Torrents of criticism were poured on the head of Jacob Epstein, American born sculptor, today, over his newest work, "Genesis," representing the birth of mankind.

The statue will not be seen by the general public until next week but critics have been granted a preview. They are almost unanimous in attacking the marble figure of a squat woman with simian-like features as the "essence of ugliness."

Epstein has replied to them, defending his latest work. "Genesis" is not ugly," he says. "I pursue my own ideas of beauty, not someone else's ideas."
